Department of Justice Will Not Act as General Counsel.

Washington, September 22.—Recent reports to the effect that the attorneys for large combinations of corporations and their principals also were hoping for some general understanding with the government authorities concerning the application of the antirust law, and that some of them had gone to the Attorney-General to ascertain what action, if any, may be necessary to make them stand right in the eyes of the government, was the subject of much discussion here to-day.

In the case of the harvester company that corp ation voluntarily submitted to the government's plan of reorganization before suit was brought, and while not going so far as the officials of the Department of Justice considered it should go, the representatives of the harvester company evinced a willingness to conform, if possible, to the views of the depart-of Justice plans of reorganization which should in good faith bring about a competitive condition and terminate monopolistic conditions, and also all agreements unduly restraining interstate trade and commerce, the Department of Justice would doubtless give them careful consideration, and if found to be adequate, would submit the court so an appropriate petition, the decree of the court to be so framed as to make the provisions of the plan binding upon the defendants, and to enjoin them from further impropolistic effort.

"But the burden of framing such plans and of demonstrating their sufficiency and adequacy must be assumed by those interested in the combinations and not by the officials of the Department of Justice.

Garth, Virginia's noted turfman, was a visitor at 'Pimlico yesterday. The Sage of Albemarie came down from Canada to look over the big string now here in charge of his son, Lewis, who is fast following the footsleps of his daddy as one of the best judges of horseflesh in this country. The elder Garth will unquestionably have the largest aggregation of theroughbreds that ever raced here, for he will have close on fo a half hundred highly bred equines during the different events on the program of the fall meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club, which is only a couple of weeks off.
